The San José Museum of Art Presents ektor garcia: loose ends
the Artist's First Solo Museum Exhibition in California

For Immediate Release

San José, CA (July 23, 2025; updated September 8, 2025)— From October 17, 2025 through June 7, 2026, the San José Museum of Art (SJMA) will present ektor garcia: loose ends, the first solo museum exhibition in California by Mexico City–based artist ektor garcia. This exhibition marks a homecoming for garcia, who was born in California and spent his formative years in the Bay Area. It brings together existing and newly created sculptures in a single installation that reflects garcia's ongoing exploration of transformation, labor, and identity through material and process.

garcia's work is shaped by a rich and eclectic array of influences, from Mexican handcraft traditions passed down by his grandmother to a DIY sensibility shaped by his Bay Area upbringing. His practice also incorporates techniques learned through YouTube tutorials and global travel. He often weaves in symbols from Mexican folktales and colloquialisms, queer subcultures, and transitional architectural forms like portals, windows, and curtains. Through this layered approach, garcia challenges social and cultural hierarchies, particularly those tied to gendered and racialized labor, while rejecting fixed definitions of existence or identity.

His material vocabulary is unconventional. It includes copper wire, cast metals, glass, clay, horsehair, seashells, leather, onyx, volcanic rock, and in one instance, even a dried pig's ear which are crocheted, knotted, woven, or cast into works that are simultaneously vulnerable and resistant, soft and hard, pliable and immobile.

“garcia’s work is always evolving. His sculptures seem quiet but restless, psychologically and politically charged in their deceptive delicacy and susceptibility to change,” said Lauren Schell Dickens, SJMA’s chief curator. “At the San José Museum of Art, we look to support artists who push boundaries and reflect the complexities of our time. garcia’s practice embodies that spirit. This exhibition is a snapshot of a larger, ongoing journey and one that speaks to transformation, resistance, and possibility.”

Each piece often begins with a single stitch or gesture, gradually growing into large scale chains, fabrics, wreaths, or altar-like accumulations. He frequently dismantles earlier works, dissecting and repurposing elements for new iterations. garcia’s work opens up possibilities for making and knowing that are constantly engaged in a deliberate process of unraveling and reworking, learning, and quiet change.

In homage to the feminist thinker bell hooks, garcia stylizes his name in lowercase letters as a gesture toward fluidity and the rejection of fixed subjectivity. His sculptures reflect this ethos: diaristic, open-ended, and perpetually in flux.

As part of SJMA’s partnership with Bloomberg Philanthropies, the exhibition will also feature new and original multimedia content hosted on the free Bloomberg Connects app. The arts and culture app will host a digital guide of the exhibition, which will include an interview with the artist and commentary relating to the new installation.
